

ATTENTION, ANGLERS:

Know the difference between King Salmon, Steelhead Trout and Coho Salmon

King Salmon

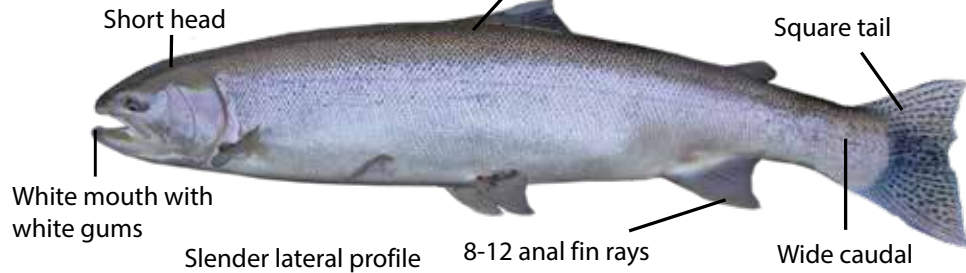

Irregular-shaped spots on back, dorsal fin, and tail
Spots on both lobes of tail

Photograph courtesy of Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife.

Steelhead Trout

Small black spots on back and both lobes of tail

Coho Salmon

Spots on upper lobe
Silver color adjacent to caudal

— Take the — Five Salmon Family Challenge

The Alaska Department of Fish and Game Five Salmon Family certificate program provides recognition to angling families who catch and document the five species of Pacific salmon commonly found in Alaska.

Certification in the program requires all salmon must be legally caught in Alaskan waters (fresh or salt water) open to the public and in compliance with current ADF&G sport fishing regulations.

Learn more at: www.adfg.alaska.gov

