

Bear Aware Checklist

Because most of Alaska is bear country, we all need to be aware of bears. Some of us live in neighborhoods where bears are commonly seen. In those areas, it is especially important when bears are awake (April-November) to keep garbage and other bear attractants out of reach of bears. Directions: Identify items around your home that might attract bears. If you answer “yes” to any questions below, you have some work to do! Refer to the solution sheet on the back to figure out how you can make your home and neighborhood safer.

Bear Aware Checklist: Solution Sheet

What YOU do really matters!

Garbage:

Secure your garbage so bears can't get to it. Keep it inside, in a bear-resistant container, in a reinforced shed or garage, or dispose of waste immediately. Remember, if a bear gets into your trash you can be fined. Bear-resistant containers are available for rent from Alaska Waste and Solid Waste Services for a small fee. For more information about rates and service call your waste provider (Alaska Waste: 563-3717; Solid Waste Services: 343-6262).

Bird Seed:

Don't feed birds during active bear season (April 15 to October 31). Clean up spilled bird seed.

Pets and other animals:

Install electric fences to keep bears out of animal pens, corrals, chicken coops, rabbit hutches and beehives. Store pet and livestock food out of reach of bears.

Fish:

If you clean your fish at home, keep all fish waste in a freezer out of reach of bears until garbage pick-up. You can also take your fish waste straight to the transfer station or landfill. Store fish nets, tackle and line indoors, in a garage, or otherwise out of the reach of bears.

BBQs and Smokers:

Clean BBQ grills thoroughly after grilling. If possible, store grill inside the garage or shed when not in use. Smoking fish can attract bears. Do not leave your smoker unattended.

Compost:

Composting can attract bears. If you live in area where bears are commonly seen, protect your compost pile with an electric fence. Do not put fish waste or smelly food scraps in your compost pile. Chop items well.

It takes a community!

Handling attractants responsibly around your home will help reduce conflicts with bears and other wildlife. By acting responsibly, you can help set an example for others about how to live safely with wildlife in our community.

Did you find anything that needed to be corrected?
If so, what will you do?
